Extra response

When do people actively endorse other people's skills? Much like how I propose job recommendations driven by topic within the context of liking certain content, I believe endorsements would grow if given within an appropriate, actionable context.

Which wording garners more of a response? This would benefit from user testing over a longer period of time with a bigger pool.

Another fun question to test would be whether people are more likely to recommend others than ask others to refer them. (I believe they are, or they're at least more comfortable)

David can refer you

Job description

We're changing the way people think about transportation. Not that long ago we were just an app to request premium black cars in a few metropolitan areas. Now we're a part of the logistical fabric of more than 600 cities around the world. Whether it's a ride, a sandwich, or a package, we use technology to give people what they want, when they want it.

For the people who drive with Uber, our app represents a flexible new way to earn money. For cities, we help strengthen local economies, improve access to transportation, and make streets safer.

And that's just what we're doing today. We're thinking about the future, too. With teams working on autonomous trucking and self-driving cars, we're in
